Greetings!

Welcome to our Level Rite Concrete newsletter! You have a front seat with our news and developments which relate to concrete lifting plus our clean & seal service. AND exciting happenings in our communities and at the office.

Concrete can be easily damaged by poor winter weather, especially once snow comes around. Rather than leaving your concrete to the will of Mother Nature, take time to prepare the concrete in or around your home for the winter. Read below for some concrete Winter preparation suggestions in our feature story. Call us today (219.765.3690) and we can schedule your free estimate.

Still happening, 10% off special on our Clean & Seal service! Because this is so popular, we are extending the 10% off special price through the end of our season. I know you want to protect your driveway vs. completely replacing it. Read below to learn all about our Clean and Seal special. You will want to get on our schedule to protect your concrete from the Winter elements! Call us today! 219.765.3690

Clean and Seal SPECIAL

10% Off Clean and Seal Service

Find out what many already know, Level Rite Concrete can clean and seal your concrete! We use a sealer that will protect your concrete surfaces from the effects of exposure that cause the damage: severe conditions like rainwater, repeated melting and freezing, and road salts, or de-icers. We will seal the surface, and infiltrate the pores of the concrete, keeping these conditions from further damaging your concrete. This product will eliminate many concrete problems, but will not change the appearance or the texture of the surface. It also will not discolor the concrete, or cause it to be slippery. Your concrete will be easier to clean, is salt, UV, and stain resistant, and environmentally responsible.

Prepare Your Concrete For Winter

Winter is right around the corner and if you are dreading the cold weather, you should also be concerned about your driveway. While freshly fallen snow may look pretty, the winter weather can take a huge toll on your driveway and the results will not look pretty. Luckily, there are a few things you can do.

Check for cracks in your driveway before the snow hits - It's a good idea to look for cracks before the first snowfall. You will want to be mentally prepared for what may come. Take a photo of your driveway and then compared it to what you see next Spring.

Seal those cracks - Any current cracks you have in your driveway are going to get worse. When the snow and ice thaws, water runoff will leak through the cracks. If they freeze again before it dries, the water expands and creates larger cracks. Call us to seal your driveway in the fall so you do not need to worry about further damage.

Use calcium-based ice melts - The type of ice melt you use on your driveway makes a huge difference. Calcium-based ice melts do little to no damage compared to some of the blends that have lots of chemicals in them.

Keep your driveway clear and clean - Once the snow and ice does hit, make sure you clear the driveway as quickly as possible and then keep it clean. As mentioned, certain ice melts have chemicals that can get into the cracks and do some serious damage. If you are able to clear your driveway of ice and snow and the subsequent chemicals, you are less likely to have damage to your driveway. Power wash your driveway before winter comes. Sticks, leaves and rocks can cause deterioration to your driveway once layers of ice and snow stack on top of them. In addition, oil and grit can also cause deterioration combined with the weather.

Clear your driveway with the proper tools - Snow blowers and shovels should be checked for wear and tear. Make sure you get your snow blower tuned up before the first snow fall. Chipped shovels can cause damage to your driveways, especially if they get caught in a crack.

Check for drainage issues - Make sure you have proper drainage. If pools of water sit in your driveway, you could have some serious issues during the winter months.

Make sure you contact Level Rite Concrete. It does not hurt to get your driveway checked out before the first snow fall hits. We can take a look and repair your driveway by raising it if the concrete slabs are uneven before the ground freezes or sealing your cracked joints.
